Abstract	The increase of refugee status claiming immigrants in Canada has led to a review of the immigration policy concerning this group. This report looks at the weaknesses of current legislation which is linked to the Geneva Convention and its Protocol, studying Canada's past adherence to the rights afforded under its protection. Also discusses public and government opinion on support for a humanitarian and generous refugee policy and questions of balancing efficiency with procedural fairness to claimants. Gives a chronology of events since 1969.

Résumé	Le processus de reconnaissance du statut de réfugié au sens de la Convention de Genève, tel qu'il est énoncé dans la Loi sur l'immigration, sert à déterminer si les personnes qui revendiquent ce statut y ont effectivement droit et peuvent bénéficier de la protection accordée aux réfugiés au sens de la Convention. Ce processus s'est avéré inadéquat, tant au point de vue juridique que pratique. # INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fiched product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (•) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications provinciales: Des ententes de dépôt ont été conclues avec plusieurs bibliothèques provinciales pour que les abonnés de Microlog reçoivent toutes les publications de ces provinces. Lorsqu'aucune entente n'existe, les listes de publications émises par les provinces sont examinées afin d'acquérir les documents.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.
2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.
3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.
4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.
5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

"How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?"

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

"Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?"

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

STEP 2/DEUXIÈME ÉTAPE

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back. Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

A jack pine spacing study was begun at Eel River Bridge on the Lower Miramichi in September 1966 on an area regenerated from fire in 1941 and spaced in November 1966. The stand was thinned at four different spacings and a control was established in which no thinning was conducted. In 1986, total height and diameter at breast height was measured for all trees that had dbh's equal to or greater than 10 cm. Merchantable volume tables were used to determine the merchantable volumes of the trees.

Unbalanced age-class distributions on some management units in Northwest Region have raised concerns of a future shortfall in wood supply in jack pine and spruce. This paper explores the increased use of red pine to meet wood-supply gaps. The paper describes red pine growth and yield, red pine seed supply, and the implications for genetic conservation.

Assessment of northern abalone stocks in British Columbia is based mainly on surveys of standard sites carried out alternately on the east coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands and the central coast. Abundance indices derived from these biannual surveys provide the basis for annual fishing quotas. Area 2E has consistently been a major producer of commercial abalone and was resurveyed in 1984 and 1987 following baseline studies in 1978 and 1979. This report documents the results of a resurvey of abalone populations in Area 2E in 1990, with the specific goal of determining the geographic extent of a further decline noted in Area 6 in 1989.

It also investigates the business linkages in eight case studies, five of which are in the poultry industries of four of the countries and the remainder of which are from other industries. The study objectives are to provide a theoretical review of the various types of business linkages and their objectives; trace the development of industry structures; develop case studies to illustrate alternative approaches used in developing linkages; develop and evaluate options that may be used for improving business linkages; and suggest roles that industry and governments may play in support of industry efforts to enhance existing linkages.

Recently, the use of fire has decreased relative to other options due to the increased cost of burning, raised public concern in areas sensitive to smoke, changes in the policy regulating burning, and a significant increase in viable treatment alternatives. This paper focuses on the alternatives to using prescribed burning as a silviculture site preparation tool on clearcut areas.

Matchedash Lake and its surrounding watershed have been identified as an Area of Natural and Scientific Interest (ANSI) representative of the Canadian Shield along the southeast coast of Georgian Bay. From 1983-89, an experimental manipulation of water levels was undertaken in the lake to simulate the shoreline conditions that had occurred in the past. In each of the years, except 1986, detailed monitoring of the shoreline vegetation was undertaken. This report analyses the data from the monitoring studies and makes recommendations for the long term management of water levels to maintain and enhance the significant shoreline vegetation.

Linear selection indexes were developed for the improvement of growth and development traits in Atlantic salmon and resulted in the progeny of the select being compared to those of the control parents. Genetic and phenotypic variances and covariances were estimated from full-sib-family data. The lack of identification of individuals necessitated certain assumptions such as zero environmental correlations between freshwater and seawater phases of growth and development. The economic weights were approximated. The population studied in experiment one was made up of progeny from early (before August 1) and late (after September 1) run parents from the Saint John River and that for experiment two had approximately 68% grise (sexual maturation after one sea winter), in contrast to 5.8% in the stock in experiment one.

The important aspect of having or not having off season trade was the problem of draft restriction caused by shallow water sections on the Eastward Southern Route.

To assess dose, many data on the concentration of radionuclides (particularly <sup>131</sup>I and <sup>137</sup>Cs) in various foods were collected worldwide in the days, months, and years following the accident at Chernobyl Nuclear Power Plant in 1986. These data, combined with measurements of air concentrations taken during the passage of the plume, were used to test time-integrated and time-dependent predictions of agricultural and aquatic food-chain models. This report reviews two such model validation exercises, one of which examined the air-forage (or grain)-milk/beef pathways, while the other modelled the deposition-water-sediment/fish pathways. Time-dependent results were studied to determine which processes were important and parameter values used commonly in models were reassessed in the light of model performance. Uncertainties about the model predictions were also considered.

To assure liquidity needs and the robustness of loss allocation in a clearing and settlement system based on netting, collateral requirements and net debt caps could be set in a specific, interrelated way. This paper shows how this approach will assure sufficient liquidity for daily settlement to occur in the event of the default of any participant in the system. It also examines the degree to which the collateral would cover each participant's obligations under the loss allocation rule. It shows how this approach to collateral requirements and net debt caps can lead to excess collateral in the system.

In the interior of British Columbia, Douglas-fir litter-fall is a major source of mule deer winter food. An earlier study found that preference for Douglas-fir foliage was correlated with tree diameter. This study identified the underlying factors of selection so that wildlife managers might have a wider range of forage enhancement options on mule deer winter range. Samples of Douglas-fir foliage were collected from trees at Knife Creek and Big Lake, and analyzed for minerals, tannins, and in vitro digestible dry matter.

This report summarizes the fence count and upstream mark-recapture escapement estimation studies at Black Creek, French Creek and the Trent River during 1990. Fish counting fences were operated in each of these sites between 1985 and 1989. Because the adult counting fence in the Trent River was poorly located and prone to flood damage, it was not operated in 1990. The primary purpose of the fall escapement studies was to estimate numbers of returning salmon in each system and to collect coded-wire tagged heads from returning fish.

Results of a study to establish a data base of pesticide use that could be updated periodically and used to identify trends; and to establish major uses of specific pesticides to help identify those that should be reduced through legislation or the promotion of integrated pest management methods. The study included commercial and agricultural pesticides, domestic pesticides, anti-sapstain chemicals, wood preservatives, and silicides (used in paper making and cooling towers). It excluded all exempted pesticides except flea control products sold by veterinarians. Survey methods included obtaining use or sales summary data submitted by pesticide vendors and pest control service licensees as part of the annual licence renewal requirements. Vendors of domestic label pesticides, anti-sapstain chemicals, and silicides who are not required to file annual sales summaries were contacted directly and asked to provide sales data. Wood preservative plants were surveyed and provided use data. Where possible, the study included an evaluation of data quality. Daily sales or use records were obtained from 53 vendors or pest control services and the quantities of pesticides reported in the daily records were compared with quantities reported on the annual summary forms.

Report to determine the criteria by which the factors that should go into a final decision before the issuance of an Airworthiness Directive can be weighed in a rational manner. Provides a comparative analysis of the treatment of technological risks by experts and by the general public, then reviews the methods for evaluating a risk/safety problem. The principal elements used in the decision are studied, with a suggested quantitative approach and an associated AD decision chart. The study determines the process of decision making as to the contents of an issued AD, and concludes with a discussion of the suggested advanced notification to the owners of aircraft regarding future ADs as practiced in the United States.

WIMS-AECL is a lattice cell and burnup code used within AECL for the analysis of reactor physics problems in the design and development of nuclear reactors. Resonance treatment is used in WIMS-AECL to calculate group-averaged cross sections that properly account for the fine structure of the flux and cross section behaviour over the resolved resonance range of isotopes such as <sup>238</sup>U. This paper describes the Stamm'ler resonance treatment as applied within the WIMS-AECL lattice cell code; reviews the validations work demonstrating the accuracy of the resonance treatment; and indicates that the methods used will be accurate for the current range of application within AECL. ### Dimensioning the multihour network by the primal-dual algorithm and benders' decomposition

By G.G. Polak and B.T. Smith. Montréal, PQ : Université de Montréal, Centre de recherche sur les transports, 1993. 32 p. : Ill., Bibl. (Publication / Université de Montréal. Centre de recherche sur les transports ; no. 951) MICROLOG 94-03073 (1 fiche)

The dimensioning of a multihour multicommodity network is a linear program seeking arc capacities and path flows to satisfy a constant flow requirement for each of a set of commodities and time periods, at least capacity cost. Both the number of columns and number of rows can be quite large. Application of the primal-dual algorithm restricts the columns to an admissible set in a restricted primal, which in turn is amenable to Benders' decomposition. The Benders' subproblem frequently yields multiple optimal solutions, in which case a Pareto optimal cut is easily found. PR PS QU SC

The ice subsurface characterization project, a multi-year study of the motion and thickness of sea ice in the Beaufort Sea, was begun in April 1990. This report presents the measurements made during the first field year of the project, from April 1990 to March 1991. Observations were made using a four-beam Doppler sonar to measure the velocity of ice movement over the mooring and a narrow-beam ice profiling sonar to measure ice draft. Two sites on the Mackenzie continental shelf north of Tuktoyaktuk were instrumented. One near the middle of the shelf, and the other near the shelf edge. Ice motion measurements were obtained at both sites at all times during the 12-month deployment when sea ice was present. Measurements of ice draft were obtained only at the northern site during April and May 1990. From this location, a topographic profile across almost 350 km of sea ice was surveyed at 1 metre intervals. This profile and a variety of statistical measures of the thickness, topography, and motion of the ice field are presented.

The crevice cave site Metacalf Rock in the Kolapore Uplands Area of Natural and Scientific Interest (ANSI) was identified as a provincially significant earth science site during a theme study of the Niagara Escarpment and as part of the Owen Sound District land use guidelines. Another occurrence of provincially significant crevice caves was incorporated in the adjacent Duncan Crevice Caves Provincial Nature Reserve, which was regulated in 1985. An evaluation of the Kolapore Uplands Special Area identified significant Amabel biohermal mounds that resisted erosion and was moulded by the last glaciation through the area. This detailed analysis of the geological and geomorphological elements in the park and ANSI was completed during summer 1991. It describes the bedrock and surficial geology, the site, economic geology, and planning considerations, including significant features, and recommendations on boundaries, land uses, and other environmental considerations. ### The Effects of juvenile spacing on wildlife habitat use during winter in the interior Douglas-fir zone of British Columbia Juvenile spacing is a widely used stand-tending practice in the interior of British Columbia. While spacing is silviculturally beneficial, little research has directly assessed the positive and negative impacts on wildlife in various forest subzones. To address this problem in one specific subzone, a preliminary study was conducted in the 100 Mile House Forest District in winter 1987/88. Six blocks of multi-layered, mature interior Douglas-fir forests were juvenile spaced in the fall of 1986 and 1987 to demonstrate a variety of spacing densities and prescriptions such as minimizing slash depth, making trails, and leaving unspaced strips of regeneration within the block. These blocks were used to study the effects of spacing on habitat use by mule deer, snowshoe hare, red squirrel, fox, coyote, and moose. The study during 1988/89 collected more data to consolidate and extend the results and conclusions found by the preliminary investigation. BC FO LS PR SC

Experimental evaluation of hydrogenations as well as isomerization as a route to attain gasoline quality that would meet the requirements of improved catalysts and better processing at reasonable costs to the producer. The pyrolysis gasoline from a mixture of gas oil derived from synthetic crude and gas oil derived from mid-western sweet crude was hydrogenated in a fixed bed reactor. Four different catalysts were used to identify which catalyst would meet required pyrolysis gasoline specifications. The kinetic parameters for styrene hydrogenation to ethylbenzene and conversion of dienes to normal paraffins and olefins were determined. Isomerization runs to increase the octane number of the hydrogenated C5s were also conducted.

Because of advances in medical treatment, people are now able to live longer and to delay death. But the ability to live longer often entails a diminished quality of life for those who suffer from degenerative or incurable diseases. The desire to be spared from prolonged suffering, the increased incidence of incurable diseases such as AIDS and Alzheimer's Disease, and a better understanding of how medical technology can prolong life and affect the dying process, among other things, have fuelled the desire to achieve greater control over decisions relating to life and death. This paper examines the social and legal issues associated with these subjects, especially in the context of the law of Canada, the United States, and the Netherlands.

Nine alternative intake configurations for small, low-head hydro intakes having varying dimensions and hydraulic shaping were tested in a physical model to determine differences in entrance loss coefficients. The model was constructed to a 1:10 scale, permitting accurate modelling of shape variations. Transitions consisting of flat concrete surfaces prepared by using flat formwork were considered and a prefabricated fiberglass face transition shape, which could be used in cases where trashracks are located separately from the intake structure, was also tested. The loss coefficients determined in the model study were used to investigate the incremental economic benefits of using progressively smoother intake shapes. For this purpose, engineering sketches of the intake configurations tested in the model were developed and cost estimates prepared. Total loss factors, including trashrack losses, were determined. Incremental benefits were calculated using a generic economic model and comparisons of net incremental benefits for alternative intake configurations were carried out.

The LTD method is evaluated in terms of error sources that might be associated with the determination of OBT in urine. The report also examines the appropriateness of human (natural) and artificial (synthetic) urine samples for OBT inter-comparison studies.

Describes the HardSys/HardDraw system, an expert system for the modelling of electromagnetic interactions in complex systems. Reviews the main concepts used in its design and evaluates various aspects of its implementation, user interaction, and modelling concepts. Identifies some deficiencies and proposes enhancements to overcome them. Reviews concepts of uncertainty and develops an approach using confidence factors and fuzzy arithmetic. Presents a new method relating both the frequency and the time domains and applies it to the calculation of failure index and shielding effectiveness.

This report presents the results of a field testing program to perform a large-scale test to apply a shotcrete cover on a portion of the waste rock dump. The main objective of the test is to evaluate material properties and the long-term efficacy of the field placed shotcrete. In addition, the large-scale test provides an opportunity to develop and use the best practicable technology to install the shotcrete concrete cover material on reactive waste rock. This test represents an open-ended system, therefore the effectiveness of large-scale cover placement on restriction of acid generation and drainage was not evaluated in this test and detailed instrumentation to monitor ARD parameters were not installed.

Information about the Jameson flotation cell had indicated that potentially it was better than conventional mechanical and column flotation cells for recovering fine sulphides. If this were true, then the technology might be applicable to Bathurst Camp complex base metal sulphide ores. Of the available ores, Caribou's appeared to be the one most likely to benefit. This report describes the results of preliminary testing to obtain improved separation of lead and zinc so that separate concentrates might be produced and higher grade lead concentrates might be obtained.

The application of hydroacoustic technology for behavioural studies and abundance estimation of British Columbia's offshore rockfish stocks was begun in 1990 following suggestions that swept-area, bottom trawl surveys were biased. This report describes a study carried out in November 1991 off Nootka Sound, along the west coast of Vancouver Island, to examine the precision of hydroacoustic technology in estimating yellowtail rockfish biomass. The survey was designed to test the repeatability of acoustic abundance estimation over three survey areas of approximately 250, 110, and 30 sq km. The report presents the results of these estimations, collected through several diel cycles with detailed observations of single groups of rockfish during critical crepuscular (dusk and dawn) periods. The typical distributional changes observed between day and night surveys are examined and trawl and catch data used for identification of species are reported. The report also presents oceanographic profiles of the study area. BC CA CF FI ND SC

Together with the surface water, soil and atmosphere submodels, CALDOS is integrated into a comprehensive, probabilistic biosphere model for post-closure assessment. This model is representative of the Canadian Shield in Ontario and CALDOS is fully generic. The model has numerous parameters and some of them are element-, radionuclide- or food-type-specific. Results of a sensitivity analysis are used to assess parameter importance in dose prediction. Quality assurance is addressed through general ill-

(Guide pour l'échantillonnage...)* : 94-03061/2 ISBN 0-919074-21-9
MICROLOG 94-03059 (2 fiche)

Provides a consistent approach to sampling, analysis, and data management for contaminated sites nationally. The manual stresses the significance of quality assurance/quality control and planning, and emphasizes the interdependence of sampling, analysis, and data management objectives. This volume provides method summaries for the analyses in a consistent format that identifies all the information needed to decide whether to use that method in preference to another, and if so, what major analytical instrumentation would be required. A method summary includes sample preparation, potential inferences, quality control requirements, comments on use, and comparison with other methods when applicable. A list of unpublished analytical methods that are used by various federal, provincial, and commercial laboratories is provided in an appendix.

Ce document a été conçu comme outil de travail pour les professeurs dans les domaines des Sciences humaines aux cycles élémentaire et intermédiaire, en Histoire au cycle secondaire, en formation des maîtres à l'université et en formation andragogique dans les communautés. Les thèmes tels l'agriculture, l'immigration, la vie de famille, et le rôle des femmes sont traités dans les témoignages. Ces thèmes permettent des applications faciles à travers la gamme d'âges des apprenants. D'autres thèmes, les préjugés ou le racisme, par exemple, bien qu'abordés dans les entrevues, sont plus difficiles à traiter dans la salle de classe.

Le chapitre 1 du document présente le sujet de manière générale. Le chapitre 2 est consacré aux principes et aux problèmes relatifs au prélèvement d'échantillons représentatifs à partir de quatre matrices, en l'occurrence des sols, des sédiments, des eaux superficielles et des eaux souterraines. Les thèmes traités sont entre autres les suivants : problèmes particuliers liés à chaque matrice, considérations relatives à l'obtention d'échantillons représentatifs, sélection des points de prélèvement et de l'équipement et conservation des échantillons après le prélèvement. Le chapitre 3 expose brièvement les critères qui sont importants dans le choix de méthodes d'analyse appropriées. Dans le chapitre 4, on décrit les critères de sélection des méthodes d'analyse. Le chapitre 5 porte sur la gestion des données. Une dernière section porte sur les données fournies par les laboratoires et sur la présentation des données dans les rapports finaux. Un glossaire des termes scientifiques employés est inclus en annexe à la fin du manuel.

Program to lay the foundation for the introduction of all-composite natural gas vehicle (NGV) on-board cylinders into Canada. This was accomplished by evaluating prototype cylinder designs and identifying the issues to be addressed in regulatory standards for the certification of all-composites. Various plastic-lined all-composite cylinders wrapped with glass fibre or carbon fibre were pressure cycled, pressured to burst, tested for resistance to impact and damage tolerance, and exposed to fire conditions. Certain design, manufacturing, and test procedures were identified that require consideration in regulatory standards for all composites.

This paper investigates the exogeneity of productivity changes in Canada using two different measures of such changes. This procedure can provide evidence on real business cycle theories in which output cycles arise from optimal responses to exogenous productivity shocks that are unaffected by factors such as aggregate demand. The paper follows the work of Evans who finds that interest rates, the money supply, and government spending Granger-cause productivity movements in the United States.

On 20 June 1993, a sensitive clay flow occurred near the former townsite of Lemieux, Ontario. The failure involved 2.5-3.5 million cu m of sand, silt, and clay that flowed into South Nation Valley, inundating 3.3 km of the valley bottom and impounding South Nation River. By late 22 June 1993, the river overtopped the dam and again flowed downstream. This paper provides a photographic record of the event and post-failure conditions.

This booklet provides information on military button makers of 19th-century London, a major centre for military uniform manufacturing. Buttons are invaluable dating indexes as makers often incorporated specific titles and addresses on the backs. The information compiled here is available from original London business directories. Information extracted from these directories include the company name, its business address, telegraph and telephone numbers, and how the company actually described its business. The result is a list of all firms that called themselves military button manufacturers at any time during the 19th century, as well as some that described themselves in other ways but that also produced buttons.

Interim dry storage of used fuel is an economic alternative to storage in water pools. This report describes the development of a model for predicting the extent or rate of oxidation of defected fuel elements stored at temperatures up to 170°C. It describes the diffusion-reaction equations used to model the ingress of oxygen through the defect in the fuel cladding. These equations are solved, with approximate analytical and numerical methods, assuming that the oxygen-fuel reaction is either first order or zeroth order with respect to the oxygen concentration. Results were obtained using an oxygen-fuel reaction rate that is independent of the extent of fuel oxidation. The effect of relaxing this assumption is studied, and literature data is used to calculate the value of the parameter  $p$  that appears in the model and equations and is compared with the value of  $p$  estimated using data from the CEX-1 experiments. Reasons are suggested for the disparity and further studies are suggested that may help resolve it.

The province of Ontario's economic package announced on March 30, 1993 included a plan to save $2 billion of its savings through the negotiation of a Social Contract. This paper provides a brief recap of the process of negotiations from the municipal perspective, and reviews the measures undertaken by municipalities to achieve compensation savings to offset the cuts in provincial transfers. The review of measures involved the analysis of plans and agreements from over 197 municipalities or nearly 25 percent of Ontario municipalities.

Numerical models for the evaluation of ramming performance through first year ridges, vol. I : RIDGERAM

This report describes the development of numerical models to assess the ability of icebreaking vessels to transit large ice features such as pressure ridges, which can be represented as a combination of level unbroken ice and ice rubble. This third phase of the program developed a numerical model for multiple-pass ramming of first-year ice ridges called RIDGERAM. This involved simulation of the entire ramming cycle, including penetration and backing and modelling of the ship motions induced by the ice. In a follow-on stage, the capability of analyzing the stability of the vessel in the ramming condition was developed in a program called RAMSTAB. This involved the addition of a hydrostatics analysis capability to the program.

Outbreaks of trichinosis among the inhabitants of the North and the participants of Arctic expeditions have been known for a long time, but the causes were uncertain, although some researchers say bird droppings are the vector and others maintain that crustaceans, mainly "Gammarus", are the main vectors of trichinosis for marine mammals. Experiments with crustaceans were conducted using the species "Anonyx nuxax" (Phipps), "Gammarus locusta" (L.), and "G. marinus" (L.), fed to birds whose dropping were then fed to fish. The fish were fed to dogs and kittens, which were killed or allowed to die and their muscles examined for trichinosis.

The mine environment neutral drainage (MEND) program was initiated to develop new and effective technologies to deal with acid mine drainage. This project was undertaken to evaluate the use of chelating cloths as a method of drainage clean-up. Polyacrylonitrile fibres can be treated with hydroxylamine solution to produce fibres with amidoxime groups. Four different Orlon fabrics, all made out of polyacrylonitrile fibres but differing from each other in the way they were woven or knit, were used as the starting materials for the production of a chelating cloth. Amidoximated Orlon cloth was evaluated for the optimal percentage conversion of nitrile groups to amidoxime groups and for their usefulness as a passive monitor and for clean-up purposes.

The purpose of this policy statement is to assist persons and groups served by the Commission to understand the scope of the protection provided by the Code with regard to sexual harassment and inappropriate gender-related comments and conduct. It distinguishes between accepted social interaction or consensual relations among individuals and unwelcome gender-related actions or demands in five areas that affect our lives. These include services, goods and facilities, accommodation, contracts, employment, and membership in vocational associations such as trade unions. The policy statement also establishes the groundwork for educational initiatives such as plain language brochures and training materials.

On donne au commencement un aperçu de la fiscalité des particuliers du Québec sur le plan statistique en faisant ressortir les principaux traits du profil des contribuables ayant produit une déclaration de revenus pour l'année d'imposition. On présente une comparaison du nombre de déclarations produites par rapport aux 2 années précédentes et on analyse 5 éléments de la déclaration: revenu total, déductions générales, déductions diverses, montants accordés et crédits d'impôt personnels, et impôt à payer. La 2e partie est constituée de 9 tableaux statistiques contenant des données historiques sur le nombre de contribuables, le revenu total et l'impôt à payer, des données fiscales détaillées réparties selon l'imposabilité, l'âge et le sexe, la tranche de revenu total et la principale source de revenus, et des sommaires des statistiques fiscales réparties selon divers regroupements géographiques. En annexes on inclut des définitions, des modifications apportées aux lois ayant une incidence sur les déclarations, et le formulaire pour l'année.

The Blowdown Test Facility (BTF), located in the NRU reactor at Chalk River Laboratories, is the main experimental tool for the Canadian in-reactor safety research program. This dedicated facility was designed for performing integrated all-effects tests on CANDU-type fuel to generate data for verifying and assessing Canadian safety analysis codes and models. This paper briefly describes the first BTF experiment and presents the results of post-test thermalhydraulics and fuel behaviour simulations, performed using the CATHENA computer code, focus on analyzing the response of the BTF test section following blowdown, during dryout, and during the final rewet phase of the experiment. The fuel behaviour simulations, performed using the ELOCA-Mk5 code, give estimates of the thermo-mechanical and fission-product release behaviour of the fuel during the course of the transient.

A Preliminary study of the effects of juvenile spacing on wildlife habitat use during winter in the Interior Douglas-fir zone of British Columbia

Victoria : Ministry of Forests, 1988. vii, 31 p. (Research report / British Columbia. Ministry of Forests ; RR 88002-CA) MICROLOG 94-03221 (1 fiche)

Juvenile spacing (non-commercial thinning) of overstocked regeneration has silvicultural benefits and has become a popular stand-tending practice in the Interior of British Columbia. In view of the increasing area subject to juvenile spacing, concern is mounting about the potential impact on wildlife. This study documents, in a preliminary way, how spacing affects winter habitat use of common wildlife species in the Interior Douglas-fir zone. Six blocks were examined that were spaced during the summer and fall of 1986 and 1987 near Big Lake in the 100 Mile House Forest district. The study examined the impact of juvenile spacing on the degree of winter habitat used by snowshoe hare, red squirrel, fox, coyote, lynx, mule deer, and moose; examined animal use of unspaced strips; explored the relationship between animal use and distance from a spaced-unspaced edge; and assessed animal use of man-made trails through spacing slash.

On April 16, 1993, AMO mailed a survey on WCB funding to all of its 670 members. The purpose of the survey was to provide the information needed to make a reasonable forecast of the financial impact of the WCB proposals on municipalities. This paper summarizes the results of that survey. It outlines some important information about how municipalities fund their WCB costs, information which could be very useful to municipalities in challenging potential policy proposals by the WCB to change the funding between the two schedules.

Reviews the economic and forestry aspects of the sector, and, in some cases, compares it with the rest of Canada. Forestry indicators refer to aspects such as inventory, harvest, and forest management of regional and provincial public and private forests. Economic indicators deal with the number of establishments, value of shipments, value added, number of jobs, and payroll. These indicators are described for each industrial sector, including logging, the sawmill and planing mill industry, the veneer and plywood industry, and the paper and allied products industry. The document also presents general financial indicators affecting the forestry sector such as price indices, interest rates, and exchange rates.

The geoduck clam fishery is managed by setting area quotas that are then equally divided for 55 individual vessel quotas. A three-year rotation of fishing areas was also implemented in 1989, with the I.Q. program to reduce the annual number of landing ports. It appears that the total harvest to date exceeds the current estimates of stock and production. Due to stock uncertainties, industry agreed to reduce the quotas but on the basis of a two-year plan being set so that they could plan their fishery and market the product. This report describes management options, the determination of quotas and quota calculations, estimates of geoduck removed by fishing and of total standing stock and quotas landed to 1991, the initial three-year rotation and quotas for 1989-91, and 1992 and 1993 quotas.

Radiation effects in glass and glass-ceramic waste forms for the immobilization of CANDU UO<sub>2</sub> fuel reprocessing waste

By J.C. Tait. Chalk River, ON : Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., 1993. 41 p. (AECL research / Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. ; AECL-10741 ISSN 0067-0367) ISBN 0-660-15161-8 CCG-P no. CC2-10741E MICROLOG 94-03343 (1 fiche)

AECL has investigated borosilicate glasses, aluminosilicate glasses, and titanosilicate glass-ceramics for the immobilization of high-level liquid wastes that would arise if used CANDU fuels were reprocessed at some time in the future to remove fissile materials for the fabrication of new power reactor fuel. This report discusses the potential effects of alpha, beta, and gamma radiation on the release of radionuclides from these waste forms as a result of aqueous corrosion by groundwaters that would be present in an underground waste disposal vault. The report discusses the solid-state damage caused by radiation-induced atomic displacements in the waste forms as well as irradiation of ground-water solutions (radiolysis), and their potential effects on waste-form corrosion and radionuclide release. The current literature on radiation effects in borosilicate glasses and in ceramics is briefly reviewed, as are potential radiation effects on specialized waste forms for the immobilization of 129I, 85Kr, and 14C.

Recent trends in the catchability of sockeye salmon in the Skeena River gillnet test fishery and impacts on escapement estimation

The Skeena River Salmon Management Committee established the Skeena River gillnet test fishery in 1955 to monitor sockeye and pink salmon escapement during the management season of June to September and to monitor the relative abundance of chinook, coho, chum, and steelhead passing to the Skeena River. Large negative biases (under-estimates) in test fishery estimates of sockeye escapement have occurred in recent years and this has raised concern about the reliability and accuracy of the test fishery as an index of abundance for all species. This report examines recent trends in the catchability of sockeye salmon in the fishery and presents evidence for factors influencing catchability.

The Roadside Tree Injury Committee was formed in 1989 to investigate the nature and extent of the tree injuries and decline adjacent to interior highways and the possible role of deicing salts in this injury. This report presents the results of Phase II of the study, consisting of a reconnaissance field survey and review of historical site activities to investigate potential natural and anthropogenic factors contributing to observed vegetation injury at 17 locations in south/central B.C. The 17 sites are located in the Ponderosa Pine, Interior Douglas-fir, and Montane spruce biogeoclimatic zones, in a variety of forest types adjacent to both local and main thoroughfare highways. The general study areas are dry to very dry, with significant to common growing season moisture deficits. Trees were classified as severe, moderate, and low injury, and separated on the basis of either symptoms consistent with salt damage, or other causes such as insect/pathogen damage, snow breakage, or bole damage.

Both chinook salmon and sockeye salmon are known to use the Stuart River for juvenile downstream migration. While a portion of the chinook salmon population migrates as post-emergent fry in May and June, some remain to overwinter in the Stuart River in the spring as one year old smolts. The objective of this study was to obtain information on the timing of migration of juvenile chinook and sockeye salmon in the lower Stuart River during the spring and to estimate the abundance of migrating chinook salmon. The migration of hatchery reared chinook juveniles as well as incidental catches of other species were also recorded. These data are baseline biological information that will assist in the development of habitat management plans for the Stuart-Takla watershed.

record of present bird populations to enable managers to gauge impacts that may occur to the ecosystem in the future. The report presents data collected as part of a series of surveys undertaken at Shagamu, Brant, Ekwan, Longridge, and Moosonee sites along the coasts of Hudson and James Bays in early June to mid-September. All sites were surveyed on three occasions, except for Shagamu, which had four survey periods. The total number of each bird species was recorded daily and daily totals for the number of species and the number of all birds observed were used for the statistical calculations. Species diversity index was calculated using the relative diversity index on a daily basis for comparison between sites and time periods.

Smart cards

Open anyone's wallet and a wide spectrum of plastic cards will likely be found. Most Canadians are familiar with a number of different types of plastic cards. In addition to these commonly used plastic cards, there are several new advanced card technologies that have yet to find their way into Canadian wallets. One of these cards is the 'smart card'. Smart card technology has been in use in Europe and Japan for over a decade, but it is just in the early stages of adoption in Canada. To examine this technology, the Office of Information and Privacy Commissioner/Ontario (IPC) has produced a comprehensive paper on smart cards. This summary omits the technical and applications discussed in the paper. It does, however, focus on the concerns and recommended action that was outlined.

In 1991, a joint federal/provincial program was initiated to monitor the presence of Atlantic salmon in British Columbia coastal streams. Based on recommendations following the first season of monitoring, the program was expanded to include monitoring in all B.C. waters (freshwater and marine) and a biological database was established. The monitoring program was established to increase the awareness of the presence of Atlantic salmon in B.C. waters; to expand the reporting of Atlantic salmon; to develop and maintain a database of the number of Atlantic salmon reported and/or observed in B.C., and to prepare an annual report of catches or sightings. The biological sampling of available Atlantic salmon was expanded to include a variety of ageing and growth structures and tissues, and a biological database was also developed. The program was conducted in 1992 by contacting a total of 108 individuals, mainly fisheries officers, conservation officers, community advisors, hatchery managers, and major commercial fish buyers, advising them to return or report all encountered Atlantic salmon. Catches of Atlantic salmon in the sales slip and mark recovery databases were reviewed also.

The trough between the northern Grand Bank and the Funk Island Bank has recently been identified as a likely corridor along which a significant biomass of northern cod migrate to the inshore areas along the east coast of Newfoundland during late spring and early summer. This report provides synoptic, monthly average, and annual time series of temperature, salinity, and density for the NAFO Cape Bonavista standard transect based on all data available from 1930-92 and gives a review of the spatial and temporal distribution of the data. A brief descriptive analysis of various indices describing the temperature and salinity field along the transect is presented, including a discussion of the 1948-92 time series of the cross-sectional area of the Cold Intermediate Layer. Summer temperature and salinity anomalies (referenced to a July-August average for 1948-92) are presented for 1984-92.

The Canadian Standards Association's guidelines for calculating derived release limits for radioactive material is a steady-state chronic release model. Although it has been assumed that predictions usually should be conservative, the model had not been tested. An opportunity to test the model arose due to the activities of the biospheric model validation study (BIOMOVs), which developed a number of scenarios with which to assess model performance. Three of the scenarios developed for BIOMOVs were used to test parts of CSA-N288.1, to see whether the predictions are truly conservative.

Analysis of leachate coming from below and around the dump is done using samples from six boreholes penetrating the entire thickness of the dump, the underlying unconsolidated sediments, and the upper part of the bedrock along with eight other observation wells on the perimeter of the dump. The boreholes in the dump have two sampling levels, one in the bedrock and the other at the limit between rock wastes and the original soil surface. Leachate from ditches is also collected using automatic samplers. This report describes the monitoring by measurement of total dissolved solids and analyses by energy dispersive X-ray fluorescence.

An episode of fungal infection at the Atlantic Salmon Federation's hatchery in Chamcook, New Brunswick was associated with a bilaterally symmetrical swelling over the optic tectum of some first-feeding Atlantic salmon fry. The fry were the progeny of 12 single-pair matings. This paper describes the nature of the infection and provides some details regarding the differential survival of the families involved. The statistical analysis system's general linear model procedure was used to test the transformed percent mortality for differences in mortality among families and between replicates within families. Pearson's product-moment correlations of mortality at varying stages in development with egg and parental traits were also estimated.

This document provides an overview of the Inspection Sector: who we are, what we are trying to achieve and how we are going about it. It begins by identifying its clients and partners - thereby emphasizing two important facts: that the sector exists to serve the needs and interests of others, and that it does not work in isolation. Next, the document sketches out a long-term vision for the Sector: what it is that we are ultimately striving to attain, in cooperation with clients and partners. The mission statement of the Sector is a short, coherent expression of its rationale. The summary of the long-term objectives helps to explain the mission more fully and provides a yardstick to measure performance. Finally, there is a set of guiding principles spelling out the basic values that underlie the way the inspection Sector does its work.
